

UBS Financial Education Program

UBS is working with EVERFI, one of the nation's leading education technology companies to launch the UBS Financial Education program. This program provides our clients with access to a series of digital, interactive personal finance courses for learners of all ages.

Whether you're trying to teach your middle school child the value of money, talk to your teenager about how to pay for college, or give your millennial confidence as they manage their own finances on their own for the first time, there is a course available to introduce important financial concepts at key life stages. Our hope is that this program will inspire meaningful dialogue about money within your family and encourage everyone to learn responsible money habits and begin planning for their financial futures.
